"They're willing to go around them if they can just locate them." she said.

A prehistoric Indian hamlet and cemetery were recently discovered in the Town of Clayton. The extent of the find is not yet known.

Miss Comins said a Carleton Island Indian burial site is marked on Jefferson County maps and will be left alone.

She said the fort built by the British in 1778 and used during the Revolutionary War and the War of 1812. The island didn't come into the hands of the Americans until after the second war. It was destroyed shortly afterwards.

Miss Comins said she expects hundreds of soldiers, from both countries, are buried at the cemetery, which was probably on or near the fort.
